

EXHIBIT NO. 5

She had no memory of the night - she was high on drugs. ¶9
What would I do if she actually had been there? ¶12
She was scared to tell the truth, but the truth was not as bad as everybody thought. ¶12	"Stoeckley perjured herself in order to escape prosecution." At 322
She was in fact in the MacDonald residence at the time of the murders, but she didn't hurt anyone. ¶12	"The group ... entered the home through a utility room door. It was dark inside the house and Stoeckley lit a candle to help the group find their way." "During the fight Stoeckley chanted "acid is groovy; kill the pigs." At 321
She didn't anticipate that the MacDonalds would be hurt. ¶13	"Some members of the group shook MacDonald to awaken him so that they could talk to him about drugs but upon awakening he became excited and began to fight with them." At 322
She was part of the core group of a witchcraft cult that did rituals. ¶13	"Stoeckley was a member of a satanic cult which was angry with military physicians, MacDonald among them, because they refused to help drug users with their problems." At 321
Mrs. Macdonald was pregnant and the cult associated newborn babies with the devil. ¶13
The idea to go to the residence came up one night while doing drugs with friends who were part of the core group. ¶14	"At approximately 10:30 p.m. [on February 16, 1970], Stoeckley, Greg Mitchell, Shelby Don Harris, Bruce Fowler, and Dwight Edwin Smith met at Stoeckley's apartment where they discussed their plans to go to MacDonald's apartment to seek his cooperation." At 321
At least one man in the group had an issue against Dr. MacDonald because he discriminated against drug users in his work at a drug treatment program - they would get court-marshal(sic) or discharged but no treatment. ¶14	"...one cult member had talked to Macdonald in his apartment for about an hour and half two weeks before the murders trying to get MacDonald to cooperate in treating drug addicts." At 320
This man talked them into going to Dr. MacDonald's house to confront him. ¶14	"The leaders of the cult decided to approach MacDonald in an attempt to obtain drugs from him and persuade him to treat drug addicts." At 321
Therefore they went to the house on the night of the murders. ¶14	"The Stoeckley group left a Dunkin Donuts restaurant at about 2:00 a.m. and drove to the MacDonald residence." At 321

The end result was that things got out of hand and the people she was with committed the murders. ¶14	"According to Stoeckley, things "got out of control" at this point and she heard Colette MacDonald calling to her husband for help from the master bedroom. Stoeckley went to the room where she saw Colette being assaulted by Greg Mitchell and another member of the group" At 322
During the violence, the MacDonald's home phone rang and she answered the phone. ¶15	"Stoeckley then heard a telephone ring and another member of the group told her to answer it. She answered the telephone and heard a soft voice ask for "Dr. MacDonald." At 322
She hung up quickly after one of her friends yelled at her to hang up the phone. ¶15	"whereupon she began to laugh until someone in the group ordered her to hang up the telephone." At 322
She noticed a toy rocking horse, and the horse was broken. ¶15	"Stoeckley left the master bedroom and went into one of the children's rooms where she saw... a hobby horse which she noted was broken." At 322
One of the springs was not attached to the horse. ¶15
She took that as a sign that Dr. MacDonald did not care for his children. ¶15
